

Whenever I think about what happens when I do internet research, I picture winding paths leading to the information that I'm looking for.

What mental image comes to your mind when you think about searching the internet? Draw it on a separate sheet of paper!

